In appreciation . . .

The staff of the 1978 Epitome wishes to acknowledge the Lehigh University support staff for the vital yet often unappreciated services it renders. It is these men and women who form the backbone of the University community. Though we come into contact with them every day, we often take them for granted; yet they are always cooperative, always helpful.

We thank them.

PRESIDENT

Deming Lewis

University President Deming Lewis, a physicist and mathematician who has done extensive work as a space engineer and research administrator has attained remarkable success throughout his life. His list of accomplishments is impressive.

He holds three degrees from Harvard University, which he entered at the age of 16, and two from Oxford University, where he studied as a Rhodes Scholar.

To call Lewis multi-talented would be an understatement.

He holds 33 patents in such fields as radar, microwave filters, digital circuits and telephone switching systems.

But why would a successful and — distinguished scientist want to be the president of Lehigh University?

"I really care about the job of University president," Lewis says. "It has an integrated purpose."

"The president is the chief administrator of the University, responsible for the budget and the selection of personnel. He is also a spokesman in a variety of ways," Lewis states.

Scheduled for retirement in 1980, one of Lewis' goals is to see the University well on the way to solving the undergraduate housing problem "once and for all."

College of Arts and Sciences

Distribution requirements

The objective of the distribution requirements is to give the student an elementary knowledge of the fields of contemporary thought and to orient the student to the world of man and nature.

The requirements also provide opportunities for students to take additional work in fields related to their major field of concentration. In addition, the preliminary requirements give students experience with each of the college's three distribution areas before a major field of concentration must be chosen.

Distribution requirements are administered by the dean of the College of Arts and Science in accordance with the group regulations given below. The student has a wide choice of offerings from which to select courses to fulfill distribution requirements and will have an opportunity to discuss these with his or her faculty adviser prior to preregistration each semester.

There are two types of distribution requirements: preliminary and upperclass.

Preliminary requirements. These should normally be fulfilled by the end of the student's fourth semester of college work. However, when a student's academic program permits it, they should be completed by the end of the third semester. With the exception of courses in mathematics, science, and modern and classical languages, which may be used for either preliminary or upperclass requirements based on the student's progress in the discipline, preliminary courses are indicated by a (P) following the title.

At least one course is chosen from each of two subcategories in each of the three distribution areas listed below:

Area I Humanities

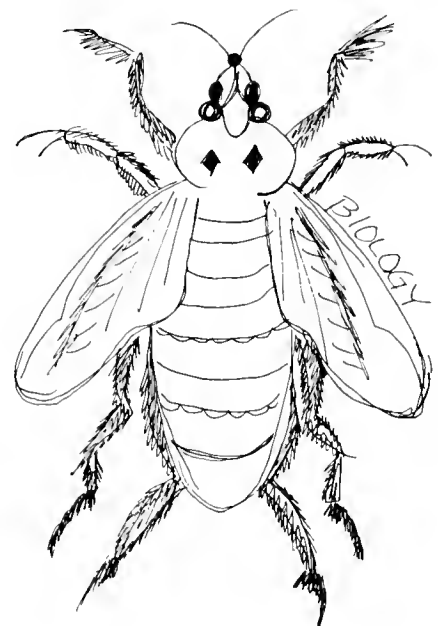

- a. Classical and Modern Foreign Languages
- b. Literature (courses in English or American literature; Greek, Latin, or modern foreign literature in translation; or foreign literature courses at the third-year level or higher not involving conversation and composition)
- c. Philosophy
- d. Arts (Music, Drama, Fine Arts)
- e. Religion Studies

Area II Social Sciences

- a. Government, International Relations
- b. Social Relations, Psychology courses designated SS (Social Science)
- c. History (including Ancient History) and Archaeology
- d. Economics
- e. Urban Studies

Area III Mathematics and Science

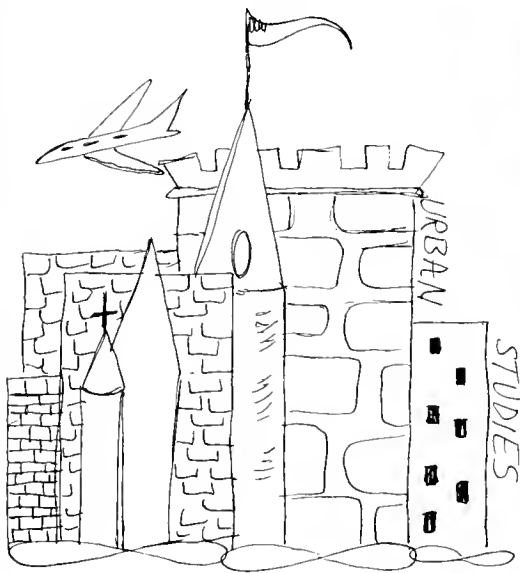

- a. Mathematics, Astronomy and Logic
- b. Biology
- c. Chemistry
- d. Geological Sciences
- e. Physics
- f. Psychology courses designated NS (Natural Science)

Upperclass requirements. To ensure intellectual breadth in the student's progress towards the bachelor of arts degree, a student fulfills upperclass distribution requirements, normally after the major field has been selected.

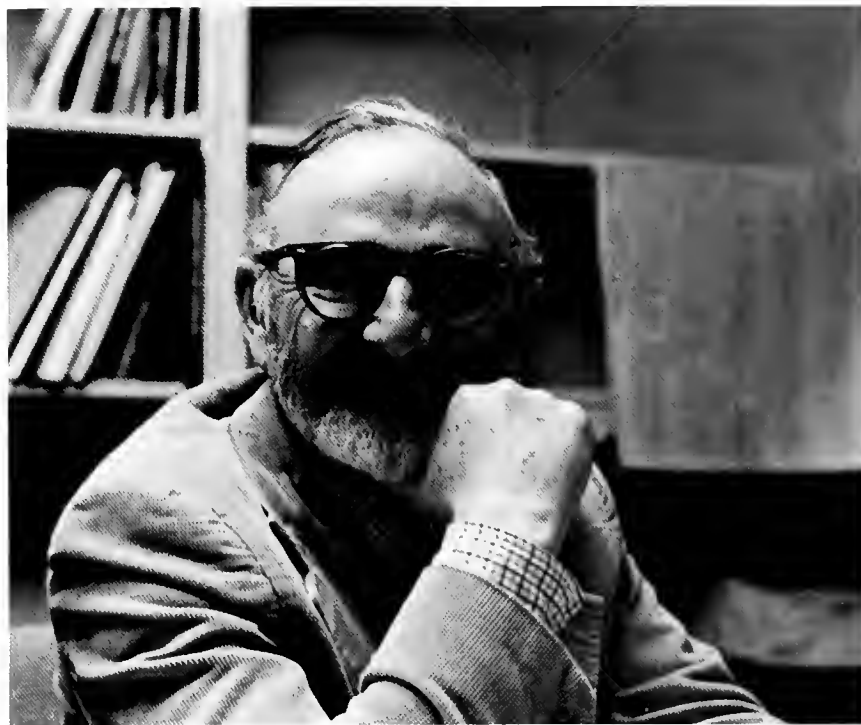

These requirements consist of twenty hours elected by the student in courses above the elementary level in the two above-listed distribution areas other than the one which includes the student's major. In the case of mathematics, science and foreign language courses, all course levels may be used to meet the upperclass requirements.

It is expected that each student will fulfill the distribution requirements in a manner that will satisfy the student's intellectual goals and needs as student and adviser perceive them. A student's program, including the choice of distribution requirements, is not official until approved by the student's adviser.

Freshman English

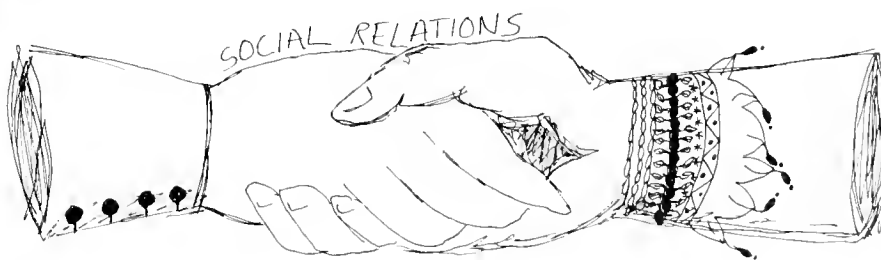

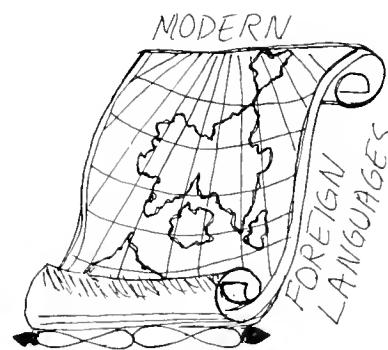

Students in all of these curricula must meet a requirement for freshman English. The normal requirement in English 1 and 2, 10, 14, or 16. For exceptions, see Advanced Placement, page 14.

The Curricula

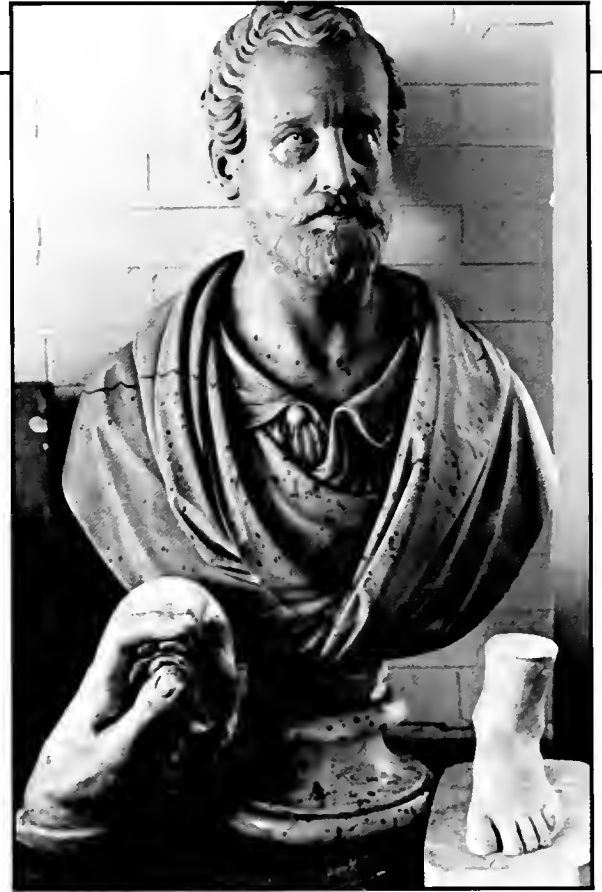

The College of Arts and Science offers several curricula options: a. a four-year curricula in the arts and sciences, leading to the degree of bachelor of arts; b. four-year curricula in the fields of biology, geological sciences, geophysics, information and communication science, psychology, and environmental science and resource management, leading to the degree of bachelor of science in the designated field; and c. a five-year curriculum in arts-engineering leading to a baccalaureate degree from the College of Arts and Science and a bachelor of science degree in the student's field of engineering.

College of Business and Economics

Goals of the college

Objectives of the College of Business and Economics are to provide an understanding (at the undergraduate level) and managerial and/or research-teaching expertise (at graduate levels) of the nature of business enterprise decision-making and resource management in the economy. Undergraduate objectives may be summarized as follows:

1. To provide tools of analytical rigor and perspective for continuing learning abilities with respect to the nature of business and its role in the economy.
2. To increase communication skills.
3. To provide breadth of appreciation of the scientific, technological, social science and humanity features of the world in which business is carried on.

4. Through a common body of knowledge to stimulate interest in and acquaint a student with basic business and economic systems of pricing, financial accounting, distribution and management processes.

5. Through a major, to provide each student with a learning exercise in depth in at least one area of business or the economy in which business operates such as accounting systems, finance, economics, economic statistics, foreign careers, management or marketing.

6. To work increasingly with mature students for intermediate and upperclass subject areas of business and economics, as an introduction to professional work or a sound basis for acquiring experience in the field or for graduate education.

Graduate programs leading to the degrees of master of business administration, master of arts and master of science as well as the Ph.D. and doctor of arts degrees are described on following pages.

John Heidenreich

After barely breaking .500 last year, the field hockey team came back into its winning ways in 1977, posting an overall 7-2-5 record, with losses coming only in the mid-Atlantic intercollegiate tournament.

During regular season play, the team had a six-win and five-tie record, facing tougher competition, including LaSalle and Villanova. First year coach Judy Turner, a recent graduate of Ursinus College and a member of the U.S. Field Hockey Team, is continuing to upgrade the schedule. Next year, the women will face two new opponents: Penn and Franklin and Marshall.

Center forward Lori Collmann again had an outstanding season, being named MVP and scoring seven goals. High scorer was Karen Lelinski, who had ten goals in eleven games. Andi Altman led the defense with consistently good defensive action. Goalie Trudi Schifter also played her part, allowing only fourteen goals while making 61 saves.

The team's true test of ability and strength came at the tournament, where they faced Penn State in the first round. At the final whistle, Lehigh was down 3-4 as Penn State scored the winning goal with less than 20 seconds remaining. The team bounced back to soundly defeat Franklin and Marshall, Lehigh's first victory in three years of tournament play. In the consolation round, the team faced and was defeated by a strong East Stroudsburg State team.

Turner is working towards improving the team in post-season tournament play by upgrading the schedule. With nine letter winners returning to the 1978 team, her goal might be realized.

The "winningest" team this season, and also the least heralded, proved to be women's volleyball. The team ended their season with a 15-4 record.

The women, coached by Barb Lipkin, held their own against some of the east coast's stronghouses, posting victories over Trenton State and Villanova and playing an excellent game against Rutgers.

Prospects for an even better record next season look very good, with all players scheduled to return. The team will also face an upgraded schedule, including West Chester State, York and Ursinus.

Bouncing back from a losing season in 1976, this year's powderpuff team ended 1977 on the winning side, defeating Centenary College and East Stroudsburg State College, losing only to arch-rival Lafayette.

Following a 32-13 trouncing of Centenary College and their free-lance playing style, the team faced a tougher opponent in East Stroudsburg, in the most physical game of their season.

Controversy reigned in the second half of the game, with Stroudsburg scoring first and converting the extra point. After defensive stalwart Lisa Melillo tallied a two point safety, Joanne Harris galloped 65 yards and scored. Lehigh added the extra point, which was disallowed because the officials weren't in position. A second attempt failed, but the Engineers maintained their 9-7 lead.

The loss to Lafayette at the end of the season hurt, not only because of the traditional rivalry, but also because of the large score. The engineers were especially hampered in this game by their "youngness", fielding only four seniors. Lehigh had the ball four times inside Lafayette's ten yard line during the contest, but were only able to score six points.

Sophomore Joanne Harris, leading scorer, receiver and runner, carried the offense, along with senior Patty Latz. The defense was sparked by linebacker Lisa Melillo and Safety Doris Campbell.

By Gary Hirschberg

Disappointed with the Engineer's 6-5 finish the prior season, skeptics and critics held high expectations for the 1977 football squad.

The 1977 season opener was against the University of Connecticut. Most regarded the game as a "warm-up" and the Engineers rolled to a surprisingly easy 49-0 win. Quarterback Mike Rieker hit a split end named Steve Kreider for a 57-yard TD bomb. The aerial was a harbinger of the 11 touchdown passes which would exceed 50 yards during the course of the season.

The second game was away at Berea,

Ohio, home of Division III powerhouse Baldwin-Wallace College. A gruelling nine-hour bus ride combined with artificial turf, a night game under lights and an inspired Baldwin-Wallace team, resulted in a 28-16 rout of the Engineers.

Returning home to Taylor Stadium the Engineers were in a must-win situation against the University of Pennsylvania. Another loss in the young season and hopes for winning season would be in jeopardy.

Using the big play, a Rieker-Kreider bomb and a punt returned for a touchdown, the Engineers registered a hard-fought, well-deserved 19-7 victory. Penn went on to tie for third in the Ivy League.

Flying to Davidson, North Carolina to face a young Davidson College squad, the Engineers unleashed a potent offense and waltzed away with a 43-7 win. Engineer John Morrissey chalked up two TD's against his former teammates.

The fifth week of the season the Engineers had a new opponent: The University of Rhode Island, members of the Yankee Conference. The Rams matched up physically and boasted an All-American candidate at full back. But the Engineers were equal to the challenge. They brought an important 42-16 victory back to Bethlehem.

The last leg of the three consecutive visiting games was at rival Rutgers University. This meeting marked the 74th and last time the Engineers met the Scarlet Knights on the gridiron. The Knights stunned the Engineers 20-0 and sent them home with a 4-2 log.

The Virginia Military Institute (VMI) invaded Taylor Stadium during Up-perclassmen Parents Weekend; the Engineer's second Division I opponent in two weeks.

Although undermanned, the Engineers stormed back from a 6-0 deficit to lead 20-6 midway through the second quarter. At the halfway mark of the third quarter, the Keydets caught Lehigh at 20-20 but a 38-yard field goal by Kenny Wood and a last minute interception return by safety Carl Reese insured the 30-20 upset win.

Freshmen Parents witnessed the clash between the Engineers and the Bisons from Bucknell University. Trailing 6-3 in the second quarter, the Engineer offense went into action. When the dust settled the gridgers had chalked up 692 yards, a new school record for total yardage in one game. Mike Rieker broke Kim McQuilken's old passing mark with 383 yards through the air. The final score: a 47-13 victory.

The Gettysburg game also marked the end of a long tradition of 45 games. Because the Bullets had scaled down their program the contest was rather like David vs. Goliath. All the Engineer back-ups gained some valuable playing experience in the 47-0 win.

An Engineer victory over C.W. Post in Taylor Stadium was the key to making the playoffs. In 1976 the Engineers squeaked by the Pioneers 17-10 after trailing 10-0. The 1977 version of the Long Island college had posted an astounding five consecutive shutout games. A win for the Pioneers would give them an outside shot at a playoff berth.

The Engineers played sloppily but some late heroics by the defense and some C.W. Post turnovers turned a tight game into a 36-10 rout.

The 113th meeting between the Lafayette Leopards and the Lehigh Engineers extended the most-played college football series in the country. The Leopards led the series 63-45-5 but the Engineers had taken five of the last six games.

While Lehigh's performance was rather mediocre, Lafayette played inspired, smart football. The Leopards led 17-14 until midway through the third quarter when Lafayette quarterback Bob Stewart dislocated his shoulder and was forced to watch the rest of the game from the sideline. Rieker and the defense took advantage of this break and shut down the Leopard attack cold while rallying for a 35-17 win.

Although the regular season was finished there was more gridiron excitement to come.

The big surprise was that the Engineers ranked number one in the Lambert Cup race. Hovering all season in third and fourth place behind the University of New Hampshire and the University of Massachusetts, the Engineers eased out Delaware for the number one spot. UMass was ranked fourth.

Shortly after the victory over Lafayette Lehigh was notified that it had been selected for the third time in five years to participate in the NCAA Division II play-offs. The opponent: The University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

No one gave the Engineers much of a chance against the tough UMass team. The Engineers had never won a playoff game and so the stage was set: the classic impenetrable UMass defense against the unstoppable Engineer offense.

On the game's first play, Rieker pumped once, swung right and set his feet. The ball soared into the air and landed into the waiting arms of swift-footed Steve Kreider. At the 14:47 mark of the first quarter, a 71-yard bomb had stunned the home team and propelled Lehigh to a 7-0 lead.

The offense looked awesome as the Engineers marched up and down the muddy rain-soaked field, a factor which curtailed the vital UMass running attack enough to cost them the game.

The gridgers built up a 23-0 lead but the UMass tenacity soon became apparent. They tied the score at 23-23 after three periods. The game see-sawed back and forth. A high punt and a fumbled fair catch gave the Engineers the ball on the 18-yard line with three minutes left to play. A nine-yarder to Steve Kreider clinched the exciting 30-23 win.

The Engineers were then paired off with the University of California at Davis. Boasting an 11-0 record, Cal

Pioneer Bowl or BUST!

Davis, the third largest state school in California, had not lost a home game in four years.

Bill Fleming and Ara Parseghian covered the game, (the Knute Rockne Bowl) for ABC Sports. The Engineers again blew a big lead, this time on national television. Down 16-0, the Cal Davis Aggies chipped away until by halftime they tied the score.

The game plans were thrown away and it became a question as to who would score the most points. Rieker and Kreider teamed up for an 81-yard TD bomb, one yard short of the NCAA record. Size difference and some key interceptions by the Engineer secondary provided the Lehigh gridgers with a 39-30 victory.

The stage was set for the finale; the place; Wichita Falls, Texas. On December 11, 1977 the Lehigh Engineers met the Jacksonville State University Gamecocks to determine the NCAA Division II champion. Six hundred Engineer fans made the trip to the Panhandle, a Pioneer Bowl record for partisan attendance.

On the field the revitalized Engineer running attack was outstanding as sophomore reserve running back Mike Ford gained 92 yards and the offensive MVP trophy. Defensive back Greg Clark gained the defensive MVP honors. Lennie Daniels added 88 yards as the gridgers controlled the game on the ground.

When Gamecock quarterback Bobby Ray Green sustained a concussion near the end of the first quarter, Jacksonville's potent wishbone attack fizzled. What ensued is history as the Engineers returned to Bethlehem with a 33-0 victory.

BASKETBALL

Basketball coach Brian Hill had to fight circumstances beyond his control during the 1977-78 basketball season. Injuries, sickness and academic problems all had a part in keeping the basketball squad from improving on last year's 12-15 record.

But for the second straight year the team, 8-18 for the '77-'78 season, made the East Coast Conference (ECC) playoffs by compiling a 5-5 record in the ECC western division.

An opening round playoff victory over Rider College sent the cagers to the quarterfinals against Lafayette. A second half rally against the Pards ran out of steam and the cagers' season ended at Lafayette.

Although no Lehigh players made post-season all-star teams, the Engineers had statistic leaders in many categories. Junior guard Bill Griffin was one of the top twenty foul shooters in the nation. Senior Ray Green was the second best rebounder in the west division of the ECC. Both Green and Griffin were among the top scorers and field goal shooters in the ECC.

Hill still has a solid core to build around for next season. His main problem is to replace Green, the seventh leading scorer in Lehigh history. Green finished with over 1,000 points and 700 rebounds in his career. Guard Ken Clifford is the only other graduating team member.

Griffin, sophomore Jeff Vandemark and freshmen Paul Hanks, Tom Unger and Kevin Riley all played in over 20 games and will be counted on heavily next year.

The squad finished the season winning six of nine and if healthy next year, is looking to start the season just as strongly.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

"Playing with intensity," or trying to do so, was the theme of this year's basketball team. Sparked by outstanding play by Sue Woytkewicz, Pat Garnish and Karen Lelinski, but hurt by the loss of Cheri Novak, the team ended with a disappointing 6-10 record.

This year was one of transition for the women. An upgrading of opponents made each game more competitive, but the team pulled through several times. A major upset came in overtime when Lehigh beat Temple, and in another game, came close to conquering LaSalle.

Captains Woytkewicz and Garnish proved very valuable, as morale builders as well as outstanding players. Wike finished her college career with superior performance as an outside shooting specialist, complemented offensively by Garnish, who led to fast break and set up the offense. Lelinski was the team's most consistent player, leading in both scoring and rebounding.

The team will enter next season's competition with additional experience in playing against major basketball powers, aided by the return of most players.

The 1977-78 Engineer wrestlers went up against one of the toughest schedules ever. The team ended the season with a 9-7 dual meet record; a third place finish at Easterns and a seventh place finish at Nationals for the second consecutive year. Six of the seven losses came at the hands of teams ranked in the top ten nationally.

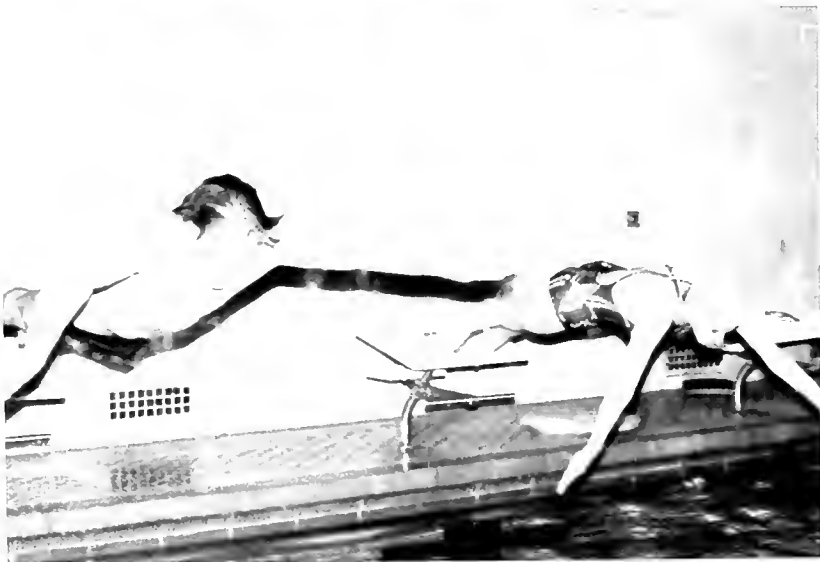

The Engineers had three Eastern champions: Colin Kilrain at 167 lbs.; Mark Lieberman at 177 lbs.; and Mike Brown at 190 lbs. Lieberman went on to win the National championship at 190 lbs.

Next year promises to be a good one. Champions Lieberman, Kilrain and Brown will be returning.

In their second season of intercollegiate competition, the softball team faced an upgraded schedule and pulled through on the winning side, both on the field and scholastically. Posting a 7-5 record, the team was also awarded the A.C. Zettlemoyer trophy for having the highest grade point average.

The 1978 season was marked by several outstanding games. A 3-5 loss to Rutgers, the leading team in the east at the time, was their most difficult game. The engineers outplayed the knights in several areas, asserting their capability to compete with powerhouses.

A 1-0 extra-inning victory over Albright proved a memorable and exciting game. Toni Leitgib pitched the first no-hitter in Lehigh softball history and also batted in the winning run in the eighth inning.

Leitgib, a junior, and Cindy Klacik, a freshman, were the most valuable players this season. Leitgib led the team in on-base percentage and pitched, along with a no-hitter, two 2-hitters and two shut outs. She also batted an incredible .625.

Klacik led the team in hits, with 17, and 6 extra-base hits. She also batted in ten runners. Her strength at third base helped the team immensely, along with her consistent batting, hitting in 10 of 12 games.

The team, coached by Tom Thompson, looks promising for next season and will face an upgraded and expanded schedule. Despite the loss of tri-captain Sue Woytkewicz, several outstanding players will be returning to work towards an even better year.

The tennis team did it again this year. For the third time in six seasons of competition, they ended with an unblemished record. Sparked by outstanding play by several women, Coach Barb Lipkin's team also fared well in the Middlestates Intercollegiate Tennis Championships, where they doubled last year's team score. Elise Braceras, Mimi McLennan and the doubles team of Patty Handwerk and Andi Altman all made it to the second round of the tournament.

Handwerk, the leading singles player, ended the season with an 8-3 record, and completed her college career with a 30-6 record. In the number two singles slot, junior Altman ended with an 8-2 record. The outstanding freshman, Braceras, completed her first season with an 11-0 record as the number three singles player.

The leading doubles team of Lynn Lasser and Allison Steele finished with a 9-0 record and were the winning force in the team's 5-4 victory over Bucknell, in the last game of the season.

Battling back from a losing season in 1977, first year coach Judy Turner led a young lacrosse team to a 5-4-1 season, ending with hopes of a brighter future.

The season showcased outstanding play by three seniors. Lori Collmann and Cheryl Kolp, co-captains, led the team with their determined and consistent play. Experienced goalie Gail Greene averaged nine saves per game.

The team's strength was tested early in the season in a tough match against Lafayette. Lehigh lost the game, but there might have been a different outcome if the contest was later in the season. The sole tie game at the hands of a tough Kutztown squad whos zone-like blockade on defense intimidated the engineer's attack. The offense became frustrated and was unable to play "their" game.

The most satisfying and best played game came in the form of a 10-3 defeat of Bucknell. The sticker's game came together offensively and defensively and, despite leading only 5-3 at the half, they held the Bisons without a goal in the second half. Diane Stix and Beeb Crouse were the stars for the defense in this game, while Greene had 15 saves.

Next season looks brighter for the stickers. Nine varsity players will be returning, working on improving a 1978 season marked by development and learning.

Behind the Scenes During a B&W Press Night

Amidst the coffee cups, broken typewriters, ashtrays and outdated newspapers, a group of about 30 hardcore Brown and White staffers embark at around 4 in the afternoon on their night-long task of making a deadline. Twice a week on press nights, every Sunday and Wednesday, the staff puts together the next issue which comes out every Tuesday and Friday.

The paper is more than an extra-curricular activity for the students who work on the business, photography, features, news and editorial staffs. It is a way of life — often superseding academics in importance. It is a sacrifice: a sacrifice of study time and social life. While most of the campus is studying, or watching TV or partying, the staff takes part in a marathon work session in the cluttered Brown and White newsroom in the basement of the UC. But it is worth it.

There is laughter, though, as well as seriousness. The staff seems to know each other well, as evidenced by the non-stop kidding and joking that helps keep things light and exciting. And there are the infamous quotes and misquotes tacked on the bulletin boards. "I'm so stupid!" — Cheryl Winters, desk person."

The 9:30 pizza break is a tradition. Two pies magically appear on the sports desk at about that time, to be quickly devoured by a staff that seems to be starved. All activity stops for ten minutes as mouths are stuffed and minds relax.

An attempt to switch to bagels on Sunday nights never made it off the ground.

The snack bar ("The Bar" to regulars) must thrive on the Brown and White, for on press nights, business picks up. Coffee cups, yogurt containers and half-consumed Cokes begin to pile up on desks as the night grows late.

Smoking was banned in the office last year, but that is hard to tell. A dirty cloud of cigarette smoke is as much a part of the news room as the garish yellow walls and the crippled chairs that no one has sat in for as long as anyone can remember.

By midnight, the staff is growing weary. Most of the work is done, the reporters are gone, as are the press-nighters — the "gopher" supporting staff. But late copy and missing pictures often hold up the final wrap-up. The late-night crew, including a desk editor, one or both news editors, the editor-in-chief and the managing editor, often stay until one or two in the morning to complete the layout and carry the copy, pictures and makeup sheets to the printer.

The Brown and White is printed by an outfit whose owner is Bernie Fetsko, a Southsider working out of a tiny shop near the Polk Apartments. Although the shop looks rundown and dirty, it actually contains space-age computer equipment which creates the typeface for the paper. Without the help of Bernie and his assistants, the Brown and White would never make its deadline.

It's two in the morning. The editorials have yet to be written and the pages have yet to be proofread at Bernie's. But Brown and White staffers occasionally remind themselves that they are students too. The last remaining editor unplugs the coffee pot, turns off the typewriters and the lights, closes the door and walks out into the early-morning quiet of a deserted campus.

Hoping to help black students feel more comfortable in this predominantly white university, the Black Student Union (BSU) is trying to build a tightly-knit, active organization for the minority.

Organized in 1964 under the name of Organization for the Enhancement of Afro-manity, the club began with 25 members. Now, with an updated name, a lounge in UC 204, and 70 members, the BSU is still striving to fulfill its original purpose: to provide a social and cultural environment for black and Hispanic students.

Almost every black student in the University has taken part in the BSU at one time or another. Most black students at Lehigh are freshmen or sophomores, and BSU Vice President William Morris said he wants to get the increasing number of blacks entering the University involved in BSU.

Membership to BSU is not, however, exclusive to minority students, Morris explained. Since the BSU has no formal membership requirements, Morris said he is encouraging white students to become involved in the Union and its activities.

The BSU has met with some obstacles on campus in the attainment of its goals. BSU President Mike Ford said, "We are treated like we are a minority . . . the University is making a conscious effort to integrate us smoothly, but this is not enough . . . The University is not ready for us as far as our cultural and social needs are concerned."

One thing that has been done to ease the friction between blacks, and whites on campus is the effort the University has made to recruit only blacks who have been in a minority situation before, according to Morris. Formerly Lehigh's black population contained many "inner city blacks." These students had difficulty adjusting to the predominantly white atmosphere at Lehigh, he explained.

Finn Assesses Forum Chairmanship

When I first decided to seek the position of chairman of Forum VIII, I had many grand ambitions for the Forum. I wanted Forum VIII to be something unique: the embodiment of circumspection and the perfect model of democracy. But then reality intruded upon my dream, and I quickly realized that one person, even though he may be the "Forum czar," can not radically transform an organization in one short year. However, I do not mean to sound disillusioned because I am not. The Forum is a strong and vital organization, but, as anyone who has sat through a Forum meeting can testify, room for improvement exists.

If I were able to create the perfect Forum, it would hold discussions on important issues, avoiding harping mindlessly on minute details. Its members would make recommendations and express opinions from a well-informed position. The Administration and the Board of Trustees would solicit and respect the Forum's recommendations, following those that are well-founded and rejecting those that are not. In addition to these ambitions, I wanted to strengthen the public image of the Forum by making it more visible. I also intended to demonstrate that a student could be the chairman without the Forum being responsive to only student concerns. In short I wanted the Forum to be a dynamic organization, expressing the concerns of the Lehigh community and thereby helping to formulate university policy.

The problem lay in transforming these ideals into a reality. There I had to deal with two simple facts: first, I was but one out of 125 Forum members and second, I was primarily a full-time student. I had limited time and resources to commit to the Forum. And therefore, the main problem was to convince others to volunteer their free time, when the benefits were not immediate. Patience is required, patience with intransigent administrators, apathetic students, and alienated faculty. Patience with a slow and often painful democratic process. Patience with long and drawn out debate.

Now the question remains: was I successful? No radical transformation occurred, for neither the better nor the worse. But none should have been expected. The Forum did, more often than not, research areas before expressing an opinion, though considerable work needs to be done to insure that all opinions are soundly based. I would like to think that more people respect the Forum now than a year ago. Although many claim that the Administration and the Board of Trustees do not take the Forum seriously, one must realize that the Forum is relative new and therefore must earn the respect of both the President and the Board; this can not be done in even eight years considering that most administrators have been here much longer. The existence of a Forum IX is adequate testimony to show that a student can handle the chairmanship.

Many people have asked me why I did it and was it worth all the time and effort. I don't think I can give an answer to the first question, except that it seemed like a good idea at the time. Occasionally, late at night, I found myself staring at the wall wondering, "Why did I do this to myself?" Part of the reason was that I was trapped by the situation: many people expected and wanted me to run for the chairmanship. Perhaps the challenge was too tempting; the challenge to prove to myself that I could handle the position. But most importantly, I thought I had something positive to offer. As to whether it was worth it, the answer is a definite yes. I learned more about people, organization and even myself than I would have otherwise. Oddly enough, I can honestly say that I enjoyed being chairman of the Forum — the sense of accomplishment outweighed the many frustrations.

— Brian Finn, Chairman
Forum VIII

The Rise of the Sororities

Three years ago they were seeking official recognition. Two years ago it was granted. Last year, they were presented a housing proposal. The proposal was overwhelmingly accepted.

Three years — a period of growth and development into one of the most independent and integral living groups on campus.

All three sororities — Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Phi and Gamma Phi Beta — have much to be proud of. They accomplished in only two years what it took some fraternities half a century to do.

How did they do it? A closer look at the dedicated women who make up these groups is evidence enough to explain the success of these groups on campus.

"The sorority (as a living group) is unique as opposed to other (types) because the girls can become a lot closer to one another than would be possible in a dormitory," remarked Sharon Trost, '78, former president of Gamma Phi Beta.

"You can feel the genuine affection between the members when you live here. It's very difficult to explain . . .," she added.

"The response to joining sororities has definitely increased," remarked Karen Talhelm, '78, former president of Alpha Phi.

"In the beginning, people had reservations about sororities, but now that the sororities are established in their 'houses' the response to joining has grown," she added.

'Home' for the sororities consists of three buildings in the Saucon Married and Graduate Students apartment complex (SMAGS), in Saucon Valley, which have been modified to suit group living. In each building, two ground-floor apartments have been renovated to provide community kitchen, dining, lounge and social areas.

Despite the construction delays in the beginning of the fall semester, in which space had not been provided for food preparation and dining facilities, as well as a shortage of beds, the women managed to hide their disappointments and "keep a stiff upper lip."

"I think we've proven that women can do something like this. It's possible for women to band together and be a viable force," Talhelm said. "The problem of the house not being finished caused some disappointments but this has now been totally solved."

"Moving and living out in SMAGS has been a big step considering that the sororities on campus are so young," remarked Diane Miller, '79, president of Alpha Gamma Delta. "I think that the sororities have shown something to the rest of the campus."

"We all enjoy living in SMAGS," Trost added. "The greatest achievement of the sororities this year has been the successful adaptation to the housing situation in Saucon Valley."

"We have a cook, eat our meals together and are active in a wide spectrum of activities," she added.

All three groups have been involved in numerous activities ranging from philanthropic to social events.

Alpha Gamma Delta sold punch to raise money for muscular dystrophy, Alpha Phi sold singing Valentines for the Heart Fund and Gamma Phi Beta sold mums for two camps for underprivileged children. Social activities included discos, wine and cheese parties and pub nights. Some of these events were held with fraternities.

Sororities should continue to get involved in more campus activities, Talhelm observed.

"We want to project the idea that we do get involved and are a friendly house where people can feel comfortable," she said.

Being a member in a sorority, "I feel that I'm part of something in the University and that I have helped a lot of people," Miller added.

"It's great to watch a girl change from year to year in her outlook and interactions with others," Trost said. "I feel that I learned a lot about women in general because the office allowed me to participate in the workings of the sorority on an administrative as well as on a personal level," Trost noted.

"I'm very proud of the girls in this house," she added.

In the fall of 1975, some administrators wanted to know what the impact of the sororities would be on the University and wanted to ensure that they would be operating on "the firmest ground for all parties concerned before a green light was given. Three years later the sororities have proven that they are indeed operating on solid ground and will continue to do so.

Sororities are gaining in popularity and membership each year. All three houses enjoyed a successful rush this year. Alpha Gamma Delta pledged 14, Alpha Phi, 21, and Gamma Phi Beta, 17. All pledges are required to learn sorority history and songs as well as to participate in cleanup responsibilities.

The sororities have changed one aspect of the University for the better because they offer University women the opportunity to be part of a unique kind of living arrangement.

The closeness sorority members share with one another is very personal and one of the most rewarding experiences of which one can become a part.

"I'll miss it, but I can always come back," Talhelm reflected.

A new tradition has developed at the University. Women have come a long way since they were first admitted to Lehigh in 1971. What role have the sororities played towards that end? Miller best summarized it by saying, "We have to start building a tradition — to start and make everyone realize that there are women here and that we are a real part of the history of Lehigh."

“The Bionic”

The importance of a fraternity is not who you know, but how you know them. The implication such that whether the sobriety of said brothers has any relevance. Sobriety, is of course, a thoroughly mundane occasion, carried out by those moribund individuals who assiduously pursue it. Therefore, imbibing to excess is the essence. It is our assertion therefore, again, etc., that the art of nostrolux and male potency as well as diligent T.V. watching is Arghrsgffff!

“Lambda Chi Alpha’s heritage is based on human vision, need, understanding, idealism, and love. Above all, it is built on a series of honest friendships. The activities and experiences that are products of Lambda Chi Alpha membership are many. They are as diverse as the individual personalities of its members, and directly shape the character of the chapter. A chapter, and thus the brotherhood, is created from the synthesis of all its interests, abilities, and personalities of the chapter members. A chapter never “is” something; it is always “becoming” something. Our chapter is not the fraternity in itself, but rather, it is one part of the whole — one unit of a great international Brotherhood made up of men subscribing to the same ideals. More than anything else, the Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity is a family, where the family members (Brothers) strive together for the betterment of the family as a whole and for the individual; not for selfish purposes, but rather because of the Bond of Brotherhood which exists between the members”.

It's been four long years for our bolting boys. They've tilted a lot and made some noise They've been tested, congested, infested, molested When times got bad they sometimes regretted They've computed, tooled, and learned about school They've stayed up all night, 'til the morning light But through it all their brotherhood has been tight It's been four long years since they've come to the hill Four years they've had their fill And now that they've got Lehigh skill Hopefully they'll acquire some bill. . . . It was the same but it was different. For most seniors it was the last time we'd be schlepping our stereos, favorite stuffed animals, hair dryers, sundry kitchen utensils and entire wardrobes back to Lehigh. It seemed impossible that four years could have gone by so quickly.

Even the front page of the Brown and White lent a sense of déjà vu . . . A housing shortage again.

In 1974, 88 students were homeless because the RH-11 (Trembley Park) complex was incomplete. Freshmen were housed in every available nook and cranny — from residence hall study rooms to spaces in the libraries — until construction was finished.

This year, because of unexpected changes in the ratios used to plan the size of the class, the number of freshmen exceeded the number of beds by 95. Four off-campus buildings were renovated to provide the housing space.

Double homes at 210-212 and 220-221 Warren Square and 222-224 Summit St., as well as the third floor of the Town House were renovated at a cost of $300,000. Although the University was able to supply each student with a bed, some of the freshmen lacked dressers or desks.

Warren Square: New Freshman Living Unit

Freshmen were not the only members of the University community to suffer housing woes. Members of Alpha Phi, Alpha Gamma Delta and Gamma Phi Beta returned to campus to find that their sorority houses had no dining facilities. Completion of the renovation three SMAGS buildings to accommodate the sororities had been delayed until November by government procedures concerning the funding.

While the University was coming to the second floor will include stores, a student dining room and a snack bar. In previous plans the complex was to have had 11 stories.

Touted by the administration as the answer to the University's chronic housing shortage, the highrise project seemed to be beset by more than its share of problems. The first stumbling block was the inability of the private developer to obtain the funds to construct the building. Secondly rumblings of Forum dissat-grips with its renovation problems, a new controversy was looming on the horizon. Preston Parr, vice president and dean for student affairs announced revised plans for the Plaza Highrise project, a residence complex to be built on the College Theater site on West Fourth Street.

Scheduled for completion in the Fall 1978, the plan calls for a five-floor highrise with ten suites on each floor. The ground floor would house a bank, while isfaction with the project would later erupt into full-scale opposition.

The Forum and a construction project were in the news for another reason.

Frustrated after several years of futile opposition, the Forum finally withdrew its objection to the Athletic and Convocation Center (ACC). The withdrawal came after the University Board of Trustees decided to proceed with the project despite the Forum objections. The multi-million ACC consists of a fieldhouse and an arena to be located in Saucon Valley. The fieldhouse has already been constructed; the arena construction was still pending at this time.

The ACC controversy and the residence problems paled before reports of a grade buying scheme.

Five students were charged by the University administration with paying an unidentified person or persons to falsify their Spring 1977 semester grades. An investigation by the administration revealed that the students had paid anywhere from $100 to $225 per grade. The five students withdrew from the University.

During the course of the administration investigation of the incident it was discovered that unauthorized entry into the safe in the Registrar's Office was fundamental in the falsification of grades. And, like a scene straight out of a grade B detective movie, it was revealed that cash was placed in library books to obtain grade cards.

While the faculty conducted its own investigation in the handling and processing of grade cards, Brian Brockway, dean of the College of Business and Economics surprised the University community by announcing that he would resign as dean at the end of the 1977-78 academic year. Brockway said he intends to return to full-time teaching at the University.

"Being a dean is not a career; it's an interruption of academic life," Brockway said. He added, "I was getting to the point that my profession as an academic was slipping. I never thought that the job as an administrator would be a career."

"A Little of Asa Packer"
Robin Miller Film Studios, Bethlehem, filmed a documentary about Lehigh for the Alumni Office this fall. The film featured an actor made-up to resemble Asa Packer, the university founder. "Packer" conducts a tour of campus and speaks about his feelings of the university to date. The film will be used for recruitment.

October brought interesting changes to more than just the leaves on Asa Packer's trees.

In a major reorganizational move, the administration transferred the Affirmative Action Office for the third time in three years. Lora Liss, affirmative action officer, said she considered the action a "demotion."

"I am not being permitted to do the kind of work that needs to be done here. In effect they have reduced my position to a mere paper position," Liss said.

The administration made the move even though significant opposition was settled a sex discrimination suit.

Ruth Silverman, former assistant professor of mathematics settled her sex discrimination suit against the University out of court for an undisclosed amount. She filed suit in December 1975 for alleged sex discrimination because she was denied tenure. The University denied the charge.

During October William Colby, former CIA director visited the campus. Colby conducted a lecture and visited classes.

"No foreign leader was ever assassinated by U.S. officials — but in Castro's case it wasn't for lack of trying. We even went to the stupidity of talking to the Mafia about it," Colby told his audience.

voiced by many faculty members. The transfer was proposed by Thomas Verbonitz, director of administrative services and Liss' supervisor. According to Verbonitz the Affirmative Action Office had not performed "up to expectations."

Liss responded, "I see this as an act of retribution on his part because he could not keep me from doing what I wanted to do."

Furthermore, she added, "This is undermining totally anything this institution means to do about affirmative action. The climate at this campus is still extremely repressive."

The administration adamantly denied that Liss had been demoted. Despite the transfers, neither her salary nor her staff had been cut, according to Verbonitz.

While trouble was brewing in the Affirmative Action Office, the University

Colby, who headed the CIA from 1973-1976, asserted that CIA noninvolvement in assassinations was proven by an eight-month congressional investigation. However, he added that there were "serious mistakes" in the CIA's handling of Castro and the Bay of Pigs invasion. He stressed that such mistakes were "few and far between," and added, "if a policeman is corrupt, you discipline him, but you don't disband the police force. We can't talk about dismantling the CIA, but it can better serve the people by being out of the shadows."

Though national security and the CIA were timely cocktail party topics, the University experienced its own security problems.

Fraternities were required to institute ID checks at the doors of their parties. The new regulation was a response to a suggestion by the University administration that the IFC handle its own party security problems. The ID check was instituted because an excessive amount of townspeople were attending the parties, according to IFC President Scott Dettwiler, '78.

During this month students were forced to think about job security.

W. Colby: Former Director of the CIA '73-'76

The Bethlehem Steel Corp. canceled its fall recruiting schedule at the University as well as all other schools it usually visits. The visits were canceled due to "unfavorable business conditions."

The recruiting schedule cancellation came during a nationwide crisis in the American steel industry. American steel producers claimed that a recent influx of lower-priced materials from European and Japanese steel producers caused layoffs and slowdowns throughout the domestic trade.

On a clear day . . .

Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. and Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. also canceled recruitment activity at the University.

Financially, the University fared much better than the steel companies. New University Treasurer John Woltjen attributed the $15,000 budget surplus for fiscal year 1976-77 to "prudent budget management."

The Plaza Highrise and the Athletic and Convocation Center (ACC) were in the news again.

The plan for the Plaza Highrise was redesigned to two buildings instead of one seven-story structure. The new plan calls for a six-story building which would be rented by the University for student housing and offices, and a one-story building for commercial use. The two buildings would share a rear wall. The main reason for the change in design was the increased security possible in a building used only by the University.

Groundbreaking for the proposed arena in Saucon Valley was delayed until November. The delay was caused because final architectural drawings for the arena were not completed.

Remember Fortnight? No — it wasn't a rock group. Fortnight, a biweekly feature supplement to the Brown and White, had its debut in October and saw its demise in December. It appeared only four times. According to B&W Editor-in-Chief Ken Bandler, Fortnight was discontinued due to lack of interest — the student body never noticed that it existed.

The concert highlight this month was the Grace Hall appearance of Kenny Loggins and Dave Mason.

Football plus Lafayette Weekend equals November — at any rate it used to.

This year, although Lehigh handed the Lafayette Leopards a sound defeat on the football field, the fans in the stands were not as rowdy as usual.

Extensive precautionary measures were taken to ensure the safety of property and people at the Lehigh-Lafayette football game. The measures included the hiring of photographers to photograph students participating in violent acts so that positive identification could be made and the University could take action, according to William Quay, dean of students.

Despite all the preparation, no major discipline problems occurred at the football game. "Most people were there to watch the football game, not to get drunk," Quay said.

The Lafayette Weekend talent show did not take place this year because no one wanted to take the responsibility for supervising the event.

Award-winning musician Chuck Mangione brought his new band to campus in November. Mangione's performance was well-received by the sparse audience.

In other concert news, tickets for the Dec. 2 Billy Joel concert sold out in less than two days — the fastest sellout in University concert history. Joel tickets sold faster than tickets for Peter Frampton in April '76 and Jackson Browne in October '76, according to Gary Hirschberg, '78 SAC concert chairman.

Nancy Maginnes Kissinger, wife of former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was elected to the University Board of Trustees. Kissinger is the first woman to serve on the board in the University's 113-year history.

Kissinger is the daughter of the late Albert Maginnes, University alumnus, trustee and honorary degree recipient. The Maginnes Hall of Liberal Arts was dedicated in his honor in 1971.

In the second major reorganizational shift in a month, the administration transferred the Registrar's Office to the jurisdiction of Preston Parr, vice president and dean of student affairs. Registrar James Wagner previously reported to Albert Zettlemoyer, provost and vice president.

The arena was in the news again. Five students peacefully protested the arena groundbreaking ceremonies. The students expressed concern that the money was going to the arena and not the University libraries.

Construction began this month on the $3.7 million, 6,000-seat facility. The arena will be used for athletic events, graduations, concerts, theatrical productions and other major events.

And now the bad news about the arena. University Treasurer John Woltjen suggested that it might be necessary to increase tuition in order to cover the arena operational expenses. Woltjen said he had serious reservations as to whether enough income could be raised through rentals to equal the arena's operating expenses.

Earlier this year the University Board of Trustees rejected a Forum suggestion that a special arena operating expense fund be endowed. The trustees favored drawing the necessary funds from the University's general operating fund.

On December 3 the Engineers defeated the Cal-Davis Aggies 39-30 in the NCAA Division II semi-final playoff game.

At this time Engineer quarterback

Engineers captured the NCAA Division II national championship in Wichita Falls, Texas, whitewashing the Jacksonville State Gamecocks by a score of 33-0.

In December "fans" became a popular word. Six hundred Engineer fans traveled to Texas, fans flocked to California and fans went to see a concert.

Thirty-one hundred tickets were sold in two days for Billy Joel's December 3 appearance in Grace Hall.

Joel's powerful performance earned him cheers before, during and after every song, as well as six standing ovations.

Not all celebrities who appeared at Lehigh in December earned ovations. Opposition from several civic and academic organizations arose when porno

Billy Joel — dynamic; Rosse — fired; Plaza Highrise — smoldered; Liss — left; and the football team burnt up the field. December, though short in days, exploded with action.

The hottest new controversy occurred in the Physical Planning Office. Joris Rosse, director of physical planning was fired.

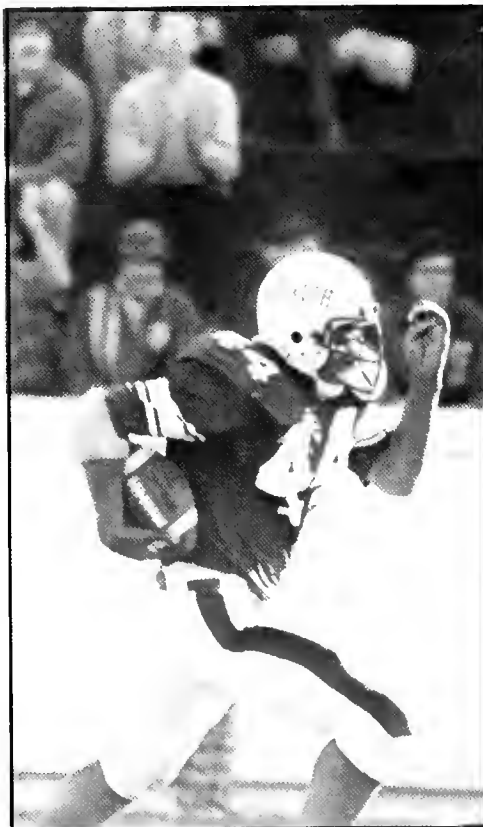

According to Eric Ottervik, vice president for planning, Rosse was dismissed in an attempt to reorganize the planning, maintenance and operations groups on campus.

Joris Rosse: Physical Planning Director

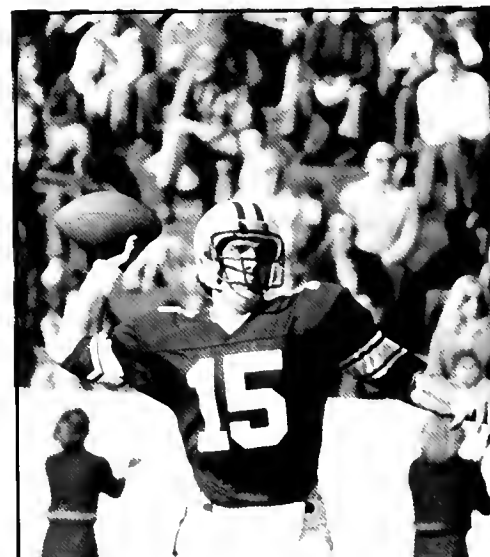

Rosse said he was dismissed because he "spoke his mind" and refused to be an administration "yes man." Rosse advised against the Plaza Highrise project.

As the clash between Rosse and the administration flared at Lehigh, the Engineer football squad unleashed its offense in California.

Mike Reiker led the nation in offensive yardage with 2782 yards and 27 touchdown passes while running back Steve Kreider caught an incredible 62 passes for 1352 yards and 16 touchdowns. Defensively, linebacker Jim McCormick led the Engineer squad with 113 tackles.

As the star of Bethlehem shined on South Mountain, the gridders shined in the Lone Star State. On December 10 the

Engineer Quarterback: Mike Reiker
The Engineer football squad proved that it had the ability to win the NCAA Division II national championship. Thanks to Reiker and the rest of the team, Lehigh was the first private institution to win the coveted title.

Crowd waiting for Billy Joel film star Harry Reems came to campus. Reems, a performer in "Deep Throat" spoke about his involvement with the controversial porno classic and the legal entanglements which resulted.

The film itself was shown on campus that same weekend to students who wanted to know what "Deep Throat" was all about. Some enjoyed the show, others never went and many left the movie before it was over.

Lora Liss, affirmative action officer, left the University in December after a rocky three-year tenure.

"The administration and I differed continuously on what we could do for affirmative action," Liss said in explaining her departure. "They relied too much on persuasion and stopped me from pushing for what needs to be done."

Liss' office was transferred in October from Administrative Services to the Personnel Office. It was the office's third transfer to lower ranking supervision in three years. In exchange for not bringing a discrimination suit against the University, Liss agreed to accept a one year leave of absence with full salary and benefits.

The Plaza Highrise project was in the news again. Several student groups voiced opposition to the off-campus structure. Their major criticisms of the project were that the building would be too far from campus; it would not solve the immediate housing shortage and it would not be a popular housing alternative.

Grades became an important topic by the end of the semester. The climate of tight competition, peer pressure and heavy work load were singled out by the faculty and students as the major causes of cheating and grade tampering.

If the goals of solving the housing shortage, improving educational fairness and inspiring a more cohesive administration were not met, at least one campus group achieved its semester goal. The Senior Class realized its Fall Gift Campaign goal of over 450 donors.

One may not remember the Russian flu, the SMAGS bus hijacking, the contaminated mayonnaise or the tuition hikes. But no one will forget the Blizzard of '78.

The first major storm hit the East

Snow removal on Registration Day

Coast on the second day of classes. The University remained open, despite the fact that many professors and students did not make it to class. University President Deming Lewis said, "I don't think we should call off classes ever. The University can never close as a whole."

On February 7 the University closed due to snow, while Dr. Lewis was vacationing in Florida. More than 18 inches of snow fell on the Lehigh Valley on that date. Classes were cancelled for the first time in more than a decade as the area was paralyzed by the worst winter storm in 30 years.

The snow aggravated the already tight parking situation. For weeks after the storm it was nearly impossible to park anywhere near campus — legally.

The removal of snow drained the University's winter maintenance budget. But the real costs of the 45 inches of snow which fell in one month were the expenses incurred when drains froze and ice caused roofs to heave.

When the snow began to melt roofs began to leak. Many students were forced out of their living units due to leaking ceilings and walls.

Our bodies no sooner recovered from shoveling snow than they were prostrated again by an invasion of the Russian flu. At the height of the epidemic more than 700 students had contacted the illness.

The Board of Trustees announced a whopping $305 tuition increase for the 1978-79 school year; the largest increase in University history. The increase brought tuition to $4,130. Increases of $125 to $175 in residence charges also were announced.

Former U.S. Atty. David Marston spoke at the University on Feb. 10, one of his first public speaking engagements since he was fired in January by U.S. Atty. General Griffin Bell. During his tenure as U.S. Atty., Marston became famous for leading the fight against corruption in eastern Pennsylvania.

Marston said his removal was sparked by a phone call to President Jimmy Carter from Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D.-Pa. During the phone call Eilberg asked Carter to expedite Marston's removal. At the time Marston's office was investigating the funding of Hahneman Hospital's new $65-million wing. He admitted that Eilberg may have been connected with the Hahneman funding irregularity. Marston refused to confirm whether Eilberg himself was under investigation.

Previously confined to hot spots in Europe and the Middle East, terrorism struck the Lehigh campus. A Lehigh student hijacked the SMAGS bus — not to Havana but from the Saucon Valley squash courts to SMAGS.

Bomb scares also plagued the University. Two anonymous telephone calls were responsible for the evacuations of Packard Lab and Coppee Hall. Exams were being administered in both buildings.

The University's last male bastion disappeared. In 1979 the Glee Club will merge with the Women's Choir to form a mixed chorus. Lehigh's was one of the last men's choral groups among East Coast Colleges to go co-ed.

Investigative reporter Les Whitten visited with journalism students. Whitten said he feels that multinational corporations which work against our constitution and for of government should be investigated.

Charles Manson's "deep-seated pre-existing hostility towards society" provoked him to commit the gruesome Sharon Tate - La Bianca murders in August 1969, according to Vincent Bugliosi. Chief prosecutor at the Manson trial Bugliosi also is the co-author of Helter Skelter Sparked by the success of the film, Saturday Night Fever, disco mania swept the nation. Lehigh was not immune to this new phenomenon as Lehigh University Volunteers (LUV) sponsored its second annual dance marathon.

Of the twenty-five couples who entered the thirty-hour marathon, eleven couples endured to the very end. Proceeds will benefit the American Cancer Society.

Steam rising from the melting snow caused the campus to look very eerie – even in daylight.

University Registrar James Wagner caused a stir on campus when he announced that students would have to pre-register for the 1978 Fall semester without knowing what times the classes will be offered.

The procedure is in effect for the Fall semester only, according to Wagner. Wagner said his office has been bogged down with clearing seniors for graduation and he did not have time to complete the class schedule.

The “fieldhouse” finally received a proper name. The building will be officially named the “Philip Rauch Fieldhouse” when a new entranceway is completed. Rauch, a University alumnus, is the major donor of funds to the $2-million fieldhouse, according to Eric Ottervik, vice president for planning. Rauch also provided the funds for the $100,000 addition.

The Outlaws and Sea Level appeared before an appreciative Grace Hall audience.

Renovation in Linderman Library continued. The unbound periodicals section in the library's rotunda was transformed into a periodicals reading area.

CARLY SIMON

SPINOSA

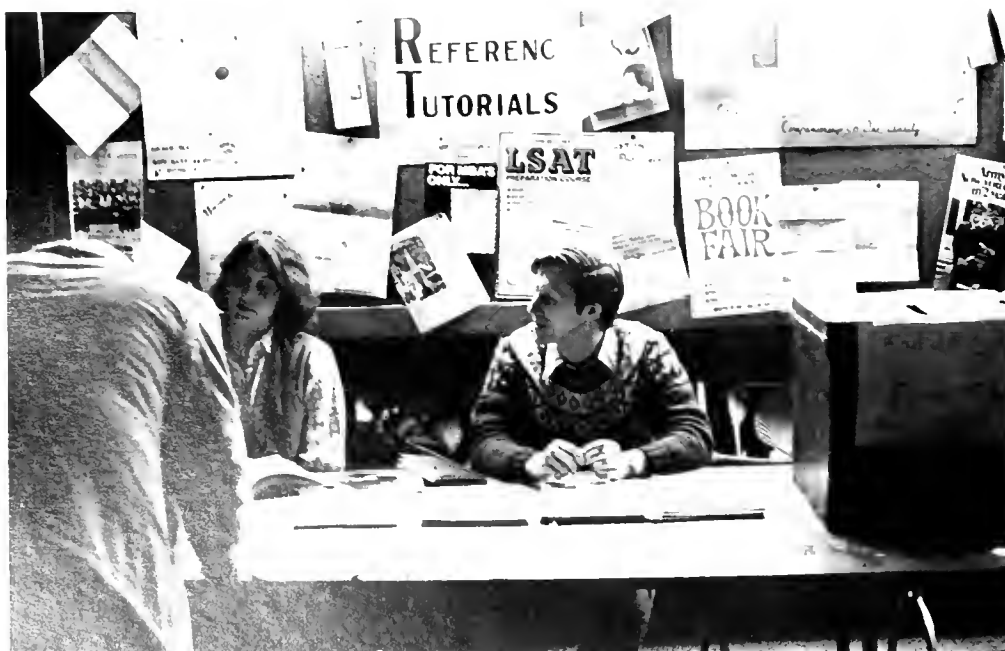

Perhaps when all is said and done the highlight of the month was that snow on the green between Maginnes Hall and Mart Library finally melted.

Lehigh's annual celebration of spring, Greek Week, was marred by a confrontation between the Interfraternity Council (IFC) and the University administration.

The administration eliminated the Campus Crawl, a traditional Greek Week event without consulting the IFC. The Crawl required contestants to run from station to station on the hill — approximately 25-33 stops — to drink a beer at each stop. Calling the Crawl a "semi-barbaric" event, Dean of Students William Quay, said the race ruins the image of fraternities and promotes excessive drinking.

Carly Simon in concert

Carly Simon, managing to hold her stage fright in abeyance, played to an enthusiastic, standing room only crowd in Grace Hall. Simon's husband, James Taylor, made a surprise appearance. Backed up by Spinosa, Simon sang some of her golden hits as well as material from her new album, Boys in the Trees. After the show, Carly commented, "I felt so much love from the audience — it was just so invigorating."

Forum IX Elections

The Brown and White kept the student body in a state of anticipation for its traditional joke issue The Clown and Gripe. Originally scheduled for April 7 (we were on vacation April 1), the Clown and Gripe finally appeared April 21.

Two venerable Lehigh institutions were in the news.

The University community noted Linderman Library's 100th anniversary. And Francis Trembley, professor emeritus of biology, passed away at the age of 74.

Other newsworthy happenings:

About 100 people signed petitions calling for the University to divest itself of its $12 million stock holdings in corporations that do business in South Africa. The signers protested South Africa's apartheid policy of racial segregation. The University Board of Trustees voted to use its proxy votes to influence the corporations instead of divesting the University's stock holdings.

SAC Elections

The Board of Trustees voted to approve the Plaza Highrise Project. Plans for the building call for 200 students to be housed in a six-story structure to be built on the site of the University-owned College Theater.

In another major personnel move, Thomas Verbonitz, director of administrative services, will report to Eric Ottervik, vice president for planning, rather than Richard Spriggs, vice president for administration. The shift was accomplished so that Spriggs could work more closely with University President Deming Lewis.

The University won another court case. U.S. District Court Judge Raymond Broderick ruled in favor of the University in the sex discrimination suit brought by former faculty member Biruta Cap. Cap, who was an assistant professor of French, brought suit against the University when she was denied tenure in 1973.

As student morale hit bottom as the end-of-the-semester pressure mounted, we learned that we weren't alone. Many prominent faculty members claimed that faculty morale was at an all-time low. The faculty spokesmen cited lack of communication between administration and faculty as the primary cause of malaise.

The topic of Ali's talk was the importance of friendship. After his short speech, Ali did some verbal – as well as physical – sparring with the audience.

By May it was all over but the shouting. Graduation was rapidly approaching but not before seniors took their last round of Lehigh final examinations.

The highlight of the last week of classes was a lecture by former heavyweight champion, Muhammed Ali. The lecture was arranged by Patricia Seidenberger, '79, a friend of Ali's business manager Gene Kilroy. The "champ" was paid $2,000 for his appearance.

The Plaza Highrise project was again in the news. The administration and student leaders clashed over plans for the building.

At issue was whether windows would be provided in the living room of each suite apartment in the residence facility. Students said the windows are "of prime importance." Administrators said the University could not afford them.

Delta Tau Delta was charged with violating the University conduct for holding a Wet-T-Shirt contest during Greek Week. Prior to the event the University administration forbade the fraternity from sponsoring the annual Greek Week event. Many University women opposed the contest.

University Vice President and Treasurer Elmer Glick announced his retirement.

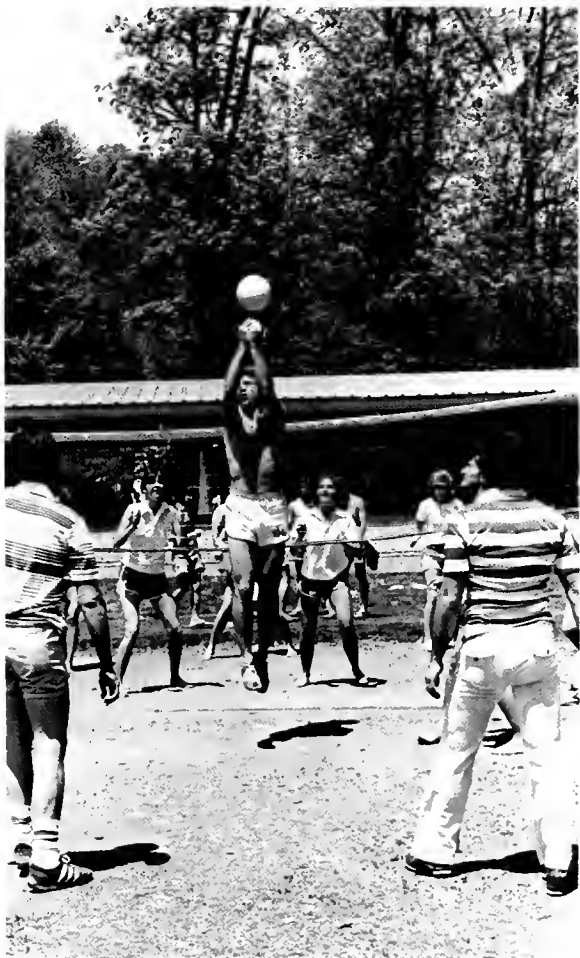

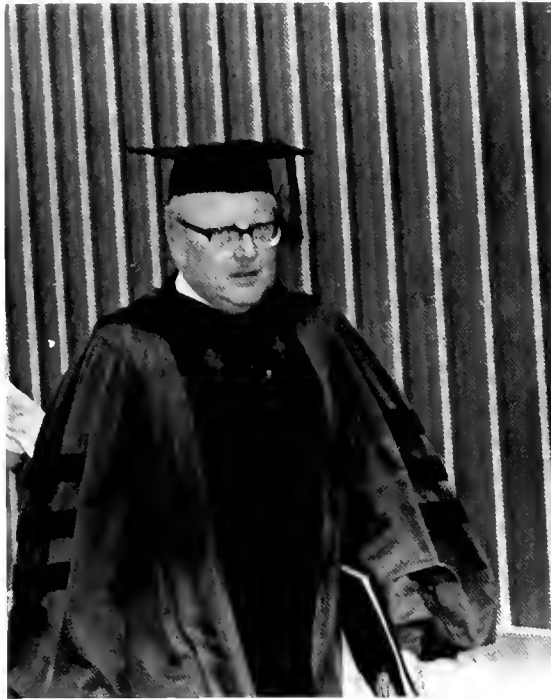

The Board of Trustees approved the Plaza highrise project. The College Theatre, which stands on the site of the proposed dormitory, will be razed before the summer is over.

“The world is full of poets and carpenters and I believe that each of us has within us some capability for both. The carpenters, the artisans, the engineers — all are problem-solvers. What is more, the achievements of carpenters often fire the imagination of poets . . . Poetry, in its broadest sense, is a creative act. The poet presents his vision of the indefinable. It’s my belief that there is an underlying poetry in the adventure of science.”

argot n. A specialized vocabulary or set of idioms used by a particular class or group.

Communicating with others often is one of the greatest challenges of life, and life at Lehigh is no exception. Every new class, every living group, every social clique, every student activity, indeed everyone seems to have his or her unique argot. As a result, dialogue on campus can become an exchange of meaningless cant.

College argot is particularly confusing to those over 30 because the lingo constantly evolves. A parent must decode "My life has been a bag of downers since I flagged Stars" to determine that the student has been depressed since he failed an astronomy course.

A sampler of the current undergraduate argot follows. We will welcome contributions of past and present argot in order to add to understanding. Here's a spring crop of argot.

ace v. to receive a grade of A.

The Experience

So This Was Lehigh

The Lehigh Experience. It is not easy to describe exactly what it was. The Experience at times was frustrating, but enjoyable; boring, yet exciting. It was the best of times and the worst of times — at the same time. No single word — or essay, for that matter — can explain it. The only thing that can be said with certainty is that The Experience took four years to complete.

Four years. It seems like forever to freshmen arriving on South Mountain. But for graduating seniors looking back on their tenure there, that time was so very fleeting that it is difficult to believe that so many experiences could have been crammed into such a short time.

The members of the Class of 1978 entered Lehigh on a rainy day in August 1974 — an appropriate introduction to what soon became known to them as the Leaky Valley. Hiking up and down the mountain, blue jeans soaked to the knees, leg muscles aching from the unaccustomed exercise, struggling to negotiate improbable staircases — the new students also got a big dose of another essential part of The Experience: Waiting on Line.

We waited on line for our ID pictures. For our bursar's receipts. For our room keys. We waited on line at the Bookstore. At the Alumni Memorial Building. And at the UC — where we did not know what was waiting for us in the form of dinner. It was a bewildering time. But we shared the same confusion, and out of it grew a sense of closeness and community that can only be shared by those who experience the same anxieties at the same times.

The empathy classmates felt for one another extended beyond The Lines of Lehigh. Many students who had been high achievers in high school became “C” students in college.

Freshman English reduced even the most hardy members to quivering masses of insecurity. Waiting for graded themes to be returned must have been akin to the anticipation of the gladiators for the emperor’s “thumbs up” signal.

The academic pressure overwhelmed most of us. Our professors at Lehigh threw more information at us in one week than we learned in a whole month in high school.

Classes were different from high school too. Introductory courses had hundreds of students, and freshmen felt lost in the masses. Attendance wasn’t required. Sleeping through a boring lecture was commonplace.

After a preliminary initiation to the University, freshmen soon felt the academic pressure increase. Five courses would seem to have coincident deadline for major projects. Lab reports were due weekly. And hourly examinations bombarded the students from all directions.

Students learned to absorb subject matter often without comprehending the material. Quality was sacrificed for quantity. “So this is college?” the confused student asked. “I thought I was supposed to learn something.”

The social scene, a new experience for most of us, provided the relief from academia that we sometimes desperately needed. Band parties, pub nights and happy hours made weekends four-day affairs.

Socializing revolved, for the most part, around the Hill — revelers trekked from fraternity house to fraternity house in search of good booze, good times and attractive women.

It was the best of times and the worst of times — at the same time.

Looking back over The Experience, seniors found that they had learned many things at Lehigh, but often the most important lessons came from outside of the classroom. For many of us, it was the first time we lived away from home. We had to learn to live with strangers and to make those strangers into friends. And we had to learn to depend on ourselves.

Lehigh for many was a time to mature. Self confidence developed through confronting the various challenges of college life — tasks which ranged from completing term projects to making sure that a clean pair of underwear always was available.

Perhaps learning to live and work with others provided the most important lessons of the Lehigh Experience. Never before and never again would the members of the Class of 1978 be in a similar environment — a community of peers, all of whom experienced the same pressures and the same problems at the same times. Friendships that would last a lifetime were forged in this environment, but not before differences in personalities and lifestyles were understood and accepted. And sometimes learning to accept others was the student’s toughest assignment.

This challenge, as well as the many others that faced Lehigh’s students, made the individuals who left South Mountain after four years different from when they first enrolled. Was it Lehigh University that made us grow? Probably not. We would have developed at other institutions, in other settings. But that realization does not make Lehigh any less special or memorable. For the University is the place where we did grow. It was quite an Experience.

Copy on the faculty subdivider pages was taken from the University catalog.

The photographs in this book are primarily the work of University students. Some team photos are by Ryan Studios, Bethlehem. The senior portraits and most of the group pictures were done by Merin Studios, Philadelphia.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Prof. McFadden once remarked to me that “publishing the Epitome is like giving birth to quintuplets.” Now that the yearbook is finished my only response is: I hope I never give birth to quintuplets.

When I first assumed the position as editor-in-chief late last spring I really had no idea what I was letting myself in for. I didn’t know the difference between a two-column lay-out sheet and a three-column one — or what the implications of choosing to use the latter would be. Manipulating a scaleograph (a tool used to crop pictures) was about as easy as juggling five oranges. It took a long time but I did manage to learn about lay-out.

Perhaps the most difficult part of the job was working with a staff which, for the most part, I barely knew. But working together on an all-consuming project as the yearbook turned strangers into friends.

This is not to say that friendliness made things run smoothly. There were conflicts. At times it seemed as if the book never would be finished. We floundered and we fought and we made mistakes. At the same time we learned and we grew as individuals.

It was that group of dedicated individuals, working as a team which made this yearbook happen.

Business manager Larry Chatzinoff (and his marvelously efficient staff) kept us solvent and paid our bills. His sometimes funny, sometimes scathing brand of humor brightened up the office — for those who were strong enough to appreciate it. Often I wasn’t; I left the office in tears more than once.

Managing editor Peter Gordenstein was invaluable — as an editor and as a friend. His creativity and boundless energy greatly enhance this yearbook. I know I couldn’t have done it without him.

The section editors, working under the worst possible conditions, did a tremendous job. In recognition and appreciation of their work, each editor’s name appears on the table of contents page — for the first time in Epitome history.

Two very pivotal editorial positions deserve mention here. Scheduling editor Bruce Peck was conscientious, organized and very patient. He took on a difficult job and managed to do it quite well. Identification editor Vince Scullin always came through for us when there was a pile of pictures to be identified. (He even stayed on after finals.)

Dan Templin and his able staff of photographers supplied us with some fantastic photos. Their photographic coverage of campus events was outstanding — enabling us not to resort to raiding Brown and White photo files (too often.)

Steve Merin, our publisher’s representative, provided the Epitome staff with expert advice and guidance. He was always there when we needed him and his contribution to this book is large indeed.

Marv Merin and the crew at Merin Studios also largely contributed to this book. Merin photographers did most of the group shots as well as the senior portraits. The studio also developed and printed most of our film, thereby taking a tremendous load off of the Epitome photo staff (and reducing demand on the B&W dark-room, which we share.)

Epitome advisor Sharon Friedman provided sound advice and moral support. I hope her experience with this year’s staff hasn’t measurably shortened her life.

Journalism professors Joe McFadden and Bob Sullivan were always willing to offer advice and solace. Knowing I could walk into their office and talk with them anytime I had a problem made my job easier.

Journalism Division secretary Ruth Mathis typed, answered our telephone and dealt with irate people demanding ’77 yearbooks, senior portrait appointments, and refunds. She must have the patience of a saint for she never complained.

My friends gave unstinting support for this endeavor. They lent words of encouragement as well as shoulders to cry on when the going got rough.

Last, but certainly not least, I must mention my family. Their love and concern were a constant source of inspiration and strength.

Fourteen months ago — if I had known then what I know now would I still have joined the Epitome? Unequivocally — yes.

The 1978 Epitome

Two roads diverged in a wood and I —
I took the one less traveled by
And that has made all the difference.

— Robert Frost
